A landscape is not merely a view, but rather a combination of picturesque elements such as trees, flowers, and rivers, as well as our desires, hopes, realities, and relationships.

Sometimes it can even resemble a dream or a reminiscence of the conditions in which we thrive or barely survive.

Landscape exists within us, as humans, in the multiplicity of our being and existence. Taking this aspect of being which is characterized by its transcendence as it is not limited to a static essence but is constantly in the process of becoming, the exhibition asks: what are the conditions in which we can flourish? What kind of diverse, lush landscapes can we dream and make into being?

The exhibition, curated by Elif Erdoğan and Remi Vesala, invites artists to reflect on these questions through their trans, nonbinary and queer identities, and across various times and geographical locations.
